

The Research Centre for East European Studies (Forschungsstelle Osteuropa – FSO) is an independent research institute attached to the University of Bremen. It is funded jointly by the Standing Conference of the Ministers of Education and Cultural Affairs and the State of Bremen.

To support the research project “The (limited) development of primary health care in the post-Soviet region: the role of donors and states in projects combating tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS in Armenia and Kyrgyzstan,” the department “Politics and Economics” is seeking a short-term freelance assistant

Brief description of the project:

The research project is conducted within the Innovative Training Network (ITN) “Caspian”. It is funded by an MSCA grant of the European Union within the context of Horizon 2020 (Grant agreement no: 642709). The research analyzes the impact of recipient government-donor and donor-donor interaction on project implementation and its sustainability. Specific areas of interest are tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS. The research focuses on Kyrgyzstan and Armenia.

Tasks of the freelance assistant:

The main task is to assist an early-stage researcher to collect secondary research data on donor-state cooperation and development aid sustainability. Duration depends on task completion. Ideally, the successful candidate is expected to start asap and finish the task by the end of April 2017. If needed, the duration will be extended.

Payment: honorarium based on a service contract, negotiated during the interview

We are looking for candidates having:

- Work experience as a researcher
- Strong analytical skills
- University degree in political science or international relations
- Good command of English
- Thorough, precise, well organized, and motivated

Submit Your CV to Gulnaz Isbekova (gulnaz@uni-bremen.de). Please use the subject line: “application ITN freelance assistant“, while applying.

The position will remain open until a suitable candidate is found. For further information please email Gulnaz Isbekova (gulnaz@uni-bremen.de).